An Unsuccessful Attempt to Harmonize

In response to a call signed by ninety prominent citizens, the greater part of whom were business men, about two hundred voters gathered at the Opera House, Tuesday evening. The call was for a meeting "to take into consideration the advisability of nominating a municipal ticket without respect to party," and the principal mover in the matter was Mr. C. L. Yost.

It was apparent to persons acquainted with the different elements represented by the assembled two hundred, even before the meeting was called to order, that it would be impossible for them to unite upon any men or measures that would be satisfactory to or accepted by even a majority of those present, and that fact was emphatically demonstrated very early in the proceed-

If the small boy doesn't look well to his laurels his reputation for mischief making and general unreliability may yet be overshadowed by the small girl. As a specimen of what the ambition of the latter in the directions indicated is attaining, the following may be giv n. A little girl appeared in one of the lower room of the seminary buildings, one morning last week, looking unusually sad and sorrowful. When questioned as to the cause of her gloom she sobbingly said that her mother was dead, and that her cruel father had refused to permit her to remain by her dead mother's side, but had heartlessly driven her from her home to the school It was afterwards ascertained that the story was entirely false, and that it had been made up by the little sinner and told in the hope of securing a holiday from the tender-hearted teacher.

Every Turkish girl, says a writer in Harper's Bazar, is permitted to attend either the public schools attached to the mosques or to receive private instruction at home—that is, in the selamluk—until she is 7 or 8 years of age, when she is no longer allowed the freedom of her childhood. At that period she feels as proud as a young miss does in Christendom who doffs her short clothes and considers herself a

There is no sinning against grammar or mur-dering the sultan's Turkish from the lips of a Turkish woman, no matter how low her lot in life. I happened to be in the apartment of a functionary at the war office. The room being large, it was partitioned with a wooden wall. The adjoining section was occupied by the auditor. I heard the voice of a woman pleading for pay. It seems that her husband was a captain in the army and away on military duty. Prior to his departure he had made arrangements to have half of his pay given to his wife, but for the last nine months she had been unable to realize a para. Being driven to extremities, she had come to state her pitiable condition. This she did in accents so sweet, words so mellifluous, and language so choice and elegant that I was not only attracted by it, but surprised at the incident. I could not, of course, see her, and consequently could not tell whether she was old or young, pretty or otherwise; but the manner of her pleading and her melodious accent were sufficient to fill my imagination with all that is poetic and lovely—and this from highest class.

The Appetite of Birds. Of all animals, birds possess the quickest motions, the most energetic respiration, and the warmest blood, and they consequently undergo the most rapid change of substance, and need the most food. Although few creatures are so pleasing to the æsthetic tastes of a poetically inclined person as birds, the breeder knows that most of them are to be looked upon as hearty or excessive eaters. Any one who will soon remark that all their thoughts and efforts, aside from the few days they spend in wooing and their short periods of resting, are directed to getting something to eat. > We are all sympathetic with the physical disaster, but how little sympathy for spiritual woes! There are men in this house who have come to middle-life who have never yet once been personally accosted about their eternal welfare. A great sermon dropped into an andience of hundreds of thousands will do its work; but if this world is ever to be brought to God it will be through little sermons preached by private Christians to an audience of one. The sister's letter post-marked at the village—the word uttered in your hearing, half of smiles and half of tears—the religious postscript to a business letter—the card left at the door when you had some kind of trouble—the anxious look of some one across a church aisle while an earnest sermon was being preached, swung you into the kingdom of God.

But there are hundreds of people in this house who will take the word that David used in the past tense and employ it in the present tense, and cry

No man seemed to care for your soul. There was another occasion when your heart was very susceptible. There was a great awakening. There were hundreds of people who pressed into the kingdom of God; some of them acquaintances, some business associates, yes, prehaps some members of your own family were baptized by sprinkling or immersion. Christian people thought of you and they called at your store, but you were out on business. They stopped at your house; you had gone around kindly message to you; somehow, by accident, you did not get it. The lifeboat of the Gospel swept through the surf and everybody seemed to get in but you. Everything seemed to escape you.

One touch of personal sympathy would have pushed you into the kingdom of God. When on communion day your friends went in and your sons and daughters went into the church, you buried your face in your handkerchief and sobbed:

So intricate and far-reaching is this web of sympathy, that I could by one word rouse a great many prayers in your behalf. No one care for your soul! No one care for your soul! Why, in all the ages there have been men whose entire business was soul-saving. In this work Munson went down under the knives of the cannibals whom he had come to save, and Robert McCheyne preached himself to death by 30 years of age, and John Bunyan was thrown into a dungeon in Bedfordshire, and Jehudi Ashman endured all the malarias of the African jungle: and there are hundreds and thousands of Christian men and women now, who are praying, toding, preaching, living, dying to save souls.

No one care for your soul! Have you heard how Christ feels about it? So long as the Squire was in sight the crowd kept perfect silence, and maintained their positions. When, however, he dissappeared in the house with Jimmy in attendance on him, there arose a hum of voices. Uncle Billy Willis mounted the work-bench and everything was still again.

"Gen-tle-men," said the old man quietly. "I recon nobody here is agoin' toe dispute my word. If he does I shall expect Bob Scruggs toe argy with him; an' if he can't convince him, It will so surprise you that I must my son Joe, here, will jine Bob's side of the debate. The two litigants knew what was expected of them, and already had stripped themselves of coats and shirts, and tied their pantaloons about their waists with their suspenders. The ring was no sooner formed than they were in it, facing each other and ready for

"Ready," answered both men at "Then, Go!"

At it they went, with the word, quick as a flash, raining blows upon each other without regard to rules of science. It was "give and take" so rapidly that the eye could not follow the quick darting fists; and the thumps of their strokes on each other's bodies sounded like hoof-beats of a galloping horse. The c owd went wild with delight. "Oh my, Skinner?" "Go it, Moses?" 'Tickle him, Sammy?""Bust his snoot?" "Salt his bacon?" and a hundred other quaint expressions went up from the lusty lungs of the bystanders, who danced and leaped about the fighters, but never presumed to touch them. When in their struggle they came near to one side of the ring, the line gave back that they might have ample room for action. It was a fair fight and the best man would win.

This ended the fight of course, and the crowd congratulated the victor, as crowds always do, while poor Moses thought bitterly, as he washed his bruises over the cooling-tub in the blacksmith shop, how the roan heifer and his lawsuit and his prestige as a fighter were all forever lost. His friends consoled him as best they could, but he was a beaten man, and had not a word to say in answer to their wellmeant condolences. He was whipped, and no language could palliate his dis-

Early English Coal Mining. Coal has been worked in England since the time of the Normans; but it was only in the beginning of the seventeenth century that explosions in collieries appear to have been heard of. Even then they were seldom fatal. One which occurred at Moslyn, on the Dee, in 1676, and which killed a man and blew off the winding drum at the top of the pit, was apparently so novel an event as to be thought worthy of description in the 'Philosophical Transactions of the Royal Society." This comparative infrequency of explosions in the early workings is readily accounted for by the mode in which coal was got at at that time. The pits were very shallow; indeed, at the beginning bayonets, and then dare to say again of the eighteenth century no pit had reached a greater depth than sixty A young man might as well go off fathoms; commonly they were not from his home and give his father and more than 20 to 30 fathoms deep. To-day some of our pits are half a mile in depth; the Ashton Moss pit at Audenshaw, for example, is close upon 450 fathoms deep. Moreover, the old "My mother and father don't care | workings did not extend to any considerable distance from the shafts. Chewing is Bad Form Now.

Manufacturers of tobacco say that the habit of chewing is rapidly becoming as obsolete as that of snuff-taking, except among workingmen. will find some of the older men of wealth and refinement who chew nowadays," said a large dealer, "but they acquired the habit years ago, when it was not thought vulgar or disreputable to chew. Some of the older judges chew, and there were members of the supreme court of the United States who were not easy on the bench unless they had a quid. A very few clergymen use tobacco in this way, and not a few of the older lawyers and other professional men of years. But in the younger generation of cultivated men of good manners there are very few, comparatively, now to be found who chew. The young men of to-day rarely acquire the habit, and I predict that within the next few years users of the weed in this form will be only those who belong to the less cultivated society. It is now regarded very bad form to chew, though thirty years ago it was not. No; chewing is going the way of snuff-taking.

Many of our most prominent public men have fought hard to overcome this habit. In Chicago and St. Louis chewing is now regarded as vulgar by persons who make any pretensions to social standing, and many of the devices employed by men to overcome the habit are amusing. At the late trial of Maxwell in St. Louis the three prosecuting officers were noticed constantly chewing during the trial, and one of them said: "Yes, we are chewing spruce gum, and we are doing it to break the habit of chewing tobacco, and if you will notice on the street you will see three out five (I mean, of course, those who are not workingmen) vigorously working their jaws. They are chewing gum, for there seems to be a tacit agreement among gentlemen here to quit chewing tobacco Many men now carry a strip of slippery elm in their pocket, and when they feel the old craving come over them, then they bite off a bit and chew it. A down-town druggist said that he sold a great deal of licorice root to men who were trying to break the tobacco habit. Roscoe Conkling used to chew, although he never used tobacco prepared for chewing. He had a habit of taking a good cigar, cutting it in two in the middle, then placing the cut end of one of the halves between his teeth, he would chew it. He did not take what Ben Butler is so fond of, a dry smoke, as it is called, but he chewed the cigar. He determined to break this habit, and to help him the more easily to conquer it, he filled his pockets with lozenges or other choice candies every morning. Conkling has a very sweet tooth, and is very fond of good candy. The last three or four years he was in the Senate he was rarely without a lozenge or other candy in his mouth. Senator Eaton and Senator Jones, of Florida, were both pets of Conkling, and both being very fond of candy almost daily performed this little comedy: Eaton would stroll over to Conkling's desk and chat a few moments, never failing to evince the profound admiration for Conkling that he had. By and by he would say: "Conkling, what do you do when your throat is dry and husky?" Thereupon Conkling would produce a box, in which were the sugar plums, and Eaton, taking two or three, would

was made in the Bad Lands on Wednesday morning. Two hunters who have been camping in that region for several weeks were awakened by a terrific shock and a roar that sounded like the rush of a mighty torrent. Running out of their camp they saw a stream of fire over one hundred feet in height shooting into the atmosphere. This immense blaze poured through the crust of earth for over an hour, when it ceased. In about five minutes after the cessation another eruption took place, the flame being about thirty feet high, but this was followed in about ten minutes by another blaze nearly as high as the first.—Bozeman (M. T.) Courier.

A new kind of glass has been recently perfected by Prof. Abbey and Dr. Scott under the auspices of the Prussian Government. Common glass usually contains about six different substances, but this new glass contains feurteen, among them the very unusual constituents boron and phosphorus, never found in the ordinary product. The new glass is said to possess extraordinary reflective power, and will be used for lenses for microscopes and other optical apparatus, with the expectation that present available magnifying powers may be enlarged a hundredfold.

IMPURE ICE AS A CAUSE OF DISEASE. The State Board of Health, having been asked by the Board of Health of Byracuse to examine into the purity of ice taken from Onondaga Lake, from the Erie Canal, at Syracuse, and from Cazenovia Lake, has not only made a careful investigation into the quality of ice from those sources, but has also prepared a report on the general question of the pathogenetic powers of contaminated ice. The Board comes to these conclusions: Ice formed in impure water has caused sickness; it may contain from eight to ten per cent. of the organic matter dissolved in the water, and in addition a very large amount of the organic matter that had been merely suspended or floating in it; it may contain living animals and plants, ranging in size from visible worms down to the minutest spores, and the vitality of these organisms may be unaffected by the Med. Press: One of our great aims as physicians is to prevent disease; another is to cut short its course when developed. Our power in these directions finds full scope among that class of disorders now generally recognized as depending upon the reception, growth, and development in the tissues of micro-organic life in one shape or another. By the continual suppression of the growth and development of these forms of cell life, we may, indeed, hope at length to erase the names of the diseases they cause from the category of those "ills that flesh is heir to." diseases I refer to are scarlet fever, diphtheria, measles, whooping cough, rheumatic fever, chicken-pox, smallpox, syphilis, hydrophobia, yellow fever, et hoc genus omne.

The germicide remedy I have found to answer as a specific and prophylactic in such diseases is the biniodide of mercury given in solution of potassic are among those who have felt it a From Scribner's Magazine, April. The Upsilantian. are among those who have left it a privilege to speak words of sympathy for Mrs. Beecher. We were among those who felt it alike a privilege and a duty to repel the accusations against Mr. Beecher, years ago. We have never known any who expressed the offensive and discreditable ideas that the Sentinel suggests, and never heard of any such "defense" being offered in his behalf. We well remember that dirt of every description was flung at him from every foul source, and our neighbor has preserved a sample of some of it and now imagines it was manufactured in Mr. Beecher's behalf.

THE Sentinel, discussing the omission of sacramental wine from the exceptions in the amendment, says:

As the attention of the Legislature was called to this feature during the passage of the resolution, and an amendment voted down, there was evidently a purpose in the omission, which was not explained in the discussions of the subject. Is it possible that the editor of the Sentinel does not know, not only that there was a purpose in that, but that it was one perfectly consistent, and prompted by anxiety for the success of the measure? Does he not know that the amendment proposed, excepting sacramental wine from the prohibition, was offered in the Senate, after the joint resolution had passed the House, and that to permit an amendment which would send it back to the House would be to give its enemies another chance to defeat it? Does he not know, moreover that that amendment to except acramental wine was offered by an enemy of the measure, who opposed it from first to last, in every place, and was offered only as a weapon with which, if possible to defeat its success? The subject may have been considered and decided in the first instance—we know nothing about that; but we do know, and the Sentinel knows, that it is not good policy for the friends of a measure to accept amendments offered by its enemies with purpose only to embarrass it; and that where the measure has already passed one House, and to amend would be to subject it again to whatever peril might lie in returning for another struggle, such a course would be little short of idiotic.

FREE WHISKY. Much is made of the idea, in anti-amendment arguments, that a prohibition law could not be enforced, and that it would remove the restrictions of the present law and simply result in free whiskey. Without stopping here to dispute the proposition that the people of this state can not or will not require the observance of a law that they shall make, we want to inquire, What is this "free whisky" which the gentlemen apprehend? When they tell us that prohibition laws simply mean free whisky, what do they mean by it? fine of $100 to $500, and imprisonment Do they mean that whisky will be given away like water, to all who want to drink? Probably not. Do they AFTER passing the House, the bill mean that every person who wants to drink will be able to get all he will pay for? So he does now. Do they mean that drunkards and drunken men will be able to get it so long as they can shall be greatly improved before that pay? So they are now. Who can name a drunkard who has any trouble in getting liquor, except the chronic trouble CAN any farmer who is not wealthy in his pocket? Do they mean that afford to be Governor of this state if liquor would be sold on the Sabbath, he place should be offered him? No and on election days, and after hours man can fill that office without spend- at night? So it is now. Where is the ing much more than the contemptible town in which this is not true? Do Congress are correspondingly inadequate. It is ky," against which we are protected by a shame to the state, and an injury to the present law, but which would be her interests. The salary amendment | precipitated upon the state by a prohibition law? We are unable to see how it could be any freer than it is. Oh. THERE is danger that in the almost | they tell us, there would be a saloon on total absorption of public attention by every corner-every man who could the prohibition amendment, some vot- raise funds to by a keg of beer or a portant offices are to be elected. An But he wouldn't give it away, would election of Judges of the Supreme he? and if every one can get all he wants now, without obstacle or inconance; and the choice of Circuit Judges venience, what circumstances would and Regents of the University is not a cause him to take more? As a matter of fact, whisky is free now, to all who are able to pay for it, or to induce anybody else to pay for it for them; and this "free whisky" bugaboo is a humbug, a bug-

bear to frighten children. In another and more important sense it is a humbug—in the sense that its sale would be free and unrestricted under a prohibition law. There are lawless men in Michigan, but the people of Michigan are not lawless. They intend to obey the laws, and intend D. L. QUIRK, that the laws shall be obeyed; and if they shall ratify this amendment by their votes next Monday, they will make laws to give it effect, and they will COLBY THE DEPOT JEWELER execute those laws. They will execute them in most parts of the state at once, and they will ultimately execute them | WATCHES, in all parts of the state. It will not then THE $250,000 Detroit liquor tax of be a question of the expediency of prohiwhich we are told so much, is the bition, but it will be a question of obeamount which the Detroit saloons dience to law and the lawful authorishould pay, under the law. The sentiment now will BLACKSMITH AND JOBBER upon the saloon keeper's house; but the sentiment now is, the law failed of purposes, nor lightens one cent the make a more effective law, and provide support that did not before exist; and any man who does not want the saloons closed will make a great mistake if he senting her as six years his senior, a perfect virago, making his home a hades, and thus extenuating, if not justifying, his erratic, and erotic escapades among his flock.—Ypsi-

BY EDITH M. THOMAS What shall I say? He hath both spoken unto me and Himself hath done it: I shall go softly all my years in the bitterness of my soul.— Isaiah xxxviii: 15.

When on my soul in nakedness
His swift, avertless hand did press,
Then I stood still, nor cried aloud,
Nor murmured low in *shes bowed;
And, since my woe is utterless,
To supreme Quiet I am vowed:
Afar from me be moan and tears—
I shall go softly all my years.

Whenso my quick, light-sandalled feet Bring me where Joys and Pleasures meet, I mingle with their throng at will; They know me not an alien still, Since neither words nor ways unsweet Of stored bitterness I spill: Youth shuns me not, nor gladness fears— For I go softly all my years.

Whenso I come where Griefs convene, And in my ear taeir voice is keen, They know me not, as on I glide, That with Arch-Sorrow I abide.
They haggard are, and droop'd of mien. And round their brows have cypress tied: Such shows I leave to light Grief's peers—I shall go softly all my years.

Yea, softly! heart of hearts unknown. Silence hath speech that passeth moan, More piereing-keen than breathed cries To sich as heed, made sorrow-wise. But save this voice without a tone, That runs before me to the skies, And rings above thy ringing spheres, Lord, I go softly all my years!

Three Reasons. "I once met a thoughtful scholar," says Bishop Whipple, of Minnesota "who told me that for years he had read every book he could which assailed the religion of Jesus Christ, and he said he should have become an infidel but for three things. "First, I am a man. I am going somewhere. Tonight I am a day nearer the grave than I was last night. I have read all such books can tell me. They shed not one solitary ray of hope or light upon the darkness. They shall not take away the guide and leave me stone-blind. Second, I had a mother. I saw her go down into the dark valley where I am going, and she leaned upon an unseen Arm as calmly as a child goes to sleep upon the breast of its mother. I know that was not a dream. Third, I have three motherless daughters (and he said it with tears in his eyes). I would rather kill them than leave them in this sinful world if you blot out from it all the teachings of the Gospel."

Sore Eyes

The eyes are always in sympathy with the body, and afford an excellent index of its condition. When the eyes become weak, and the lids inflamed and sore, it is an evidence that the system has become disordered by Scrofula, for which Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best known remedy.

Scrofula, which produced a painful inflammation in my eyes, caused me much suffering for a number of years. By the advice of a physician I commenced taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using this medicine a short time I was completely

TRADE REVIEW.

Depression Indications in Some Lines -The Money Market.

Increasing.

R. G. Dun & Co. in their weekly trade review, say: "April is close at hand, and some anxiety as to the money market is oldest, quaintest, and most powerful. Northern Pacific trains crossed the usual at this season. The banks have been the bels of Rome were clanging Friday bridge and trestle, at Bismarck, D. T., sending large amounts to the interior Sunday, for the first time in eight days through deposits at the Treasury and issues of silver certificates elsewhere, and City to Santa Maria. Now and then a there has been a heavy demand for Phila- grudging ray of sunlight glinted on the delphia exchange, so that a further decline in reserves is expected. The Western and Southern demand for money is intensified by a desire to ship products before the inerstate act and change of rates goes into Though the demand at Chicago is reported diminishing, rates are 6 to 8 per cent. All the circumstances make it comparatively easy for an operator to produce ght money if he pleases. The Treasury is taken in $1,700,000 more gold than it had paid out during the past week, but has added $3,000,000 to the outstanding silver certificates, and put out some legal tenders also; the reduction of rates by the carriage he looked pale but happy. The Cardinal, having donned the scarlet cappa Bank of England and the abundance money there favor contined ease in this market, as does the later for ign trade, exports from New York for three weeks being 18 per cent. larger than last year, with imports 71/2 per cent. larger. February official report shows an increase of $2,800,000 in exports over last year, the amount being the largest since 1883, but imports were the largest on record for many years in February, and the excess of imports was $4,214,357; gold exports for month exceeding imports by $1,533,-

> 'Railroad business has been large. Westbound shipments from chief Eastern cities were 144,160 tons in February against 134,980 last year, but east-bound tonnage was 741,250 tons, against 856,294 tons last year. The temporary activity of March does not indicate larger business after the change of rates, however, nor is 296 to date last year, a safe indication as to the future. Reports regarding the iron business are not favorable, imports evidently having a depressing effect. It would not be strange if a reaction should soon begin; the rise which began in 1871 lasted twenty months, the rise which began in 1878 lasted sixteen months, and the rise which began in 1885 has now lasted about eighteen months. The volume of legitimate business is large and increasing, as exchanges and tonnage records show, but speculation in most markets is dead. Oil speculation suffers from pending bills in Ohio and Pennsylvania. Pork products have reacted a little. Wool is lower, the demand for goods being slack. Wheat has declined 1 cent, corn about 1/2 a cent, and oats a shade, with unusually small sales and large receipts. Cotton has advanced 1/4 and coffee 1/2 a cent, and beef is stronger but the prevailing uncertainty affects most branches of business unfavorably, excepting as transactions are hastened to make shipments by rail before the change in rates and the expiration of contracts. "The business failures during the last even days number for the United States 218, for Canada 41, total 259, against 220 last week, and 221 for the corresponding week of last year. The casulaties are considerably above the average in the Southern States and in Canada. In New York City there were 10 failures, in the New England States, 31, and in the Middle

VETO MESSAGES.

The Number of Veto Messages Issued by Each President-Some Peculiar and Interesting Facts.

The Government Printing Office, at Washington, has just issued a volume containing all the veto messages of each President of the United States, with th action of Congress on each, from Washington to Cleveland. It contains much that is comparatively new and interesting. It recalls a forgotten practice of sending in veto messages at a subsequent session of Congress when an objectionable bill reached the President so near adjournment that he did not have time to veto it to the session that passed it. In other words, fourteen of the messages did not kill bills. The bills were killed by the non-signing of them and the adjournment of Congress, but they were sent in to the next ensuing session of Congress to explain why the so called pocket veto had been administered. Washington was the author of two vetoes, Madison of six, and Monroe of one; Jackson sent in thirteen vetoes, of which five were explanations of pocket vetoes at previous sessions of ongress, and one was an explanation to the ongress that passed the bill in its last expiring hours of the reasons why he would neither sign the bill nor veto it. This last message was particularly dated "March 3, 1837, 11:45 o. m.," a fact which indicates that at that time the last day of Congress was supposed to end at midnight of the 3d instead of at noon on the 4th, as is the present practice. Tyler is put down in the index as the author of eleven vetoes, but two of them were in a single message explaining wh he applied the pocket veto at the previous session. Tyler had one bill passed over his veto. This was in 1845, and it was the first time the thing was done.

Polk vetoed three bills. Pierce sent in ten veto messages of nine bills. He very briefly vetoed a river and harbor bill be cause he did not have time to say all he wanted to, and at the next session he expounded his whole belief on internal improvements in the second veto of this bill. In some session for are mere . Pierce's ills already subsequent on vetoed which, the spite of mpiler of ip 113, but only eleven of these are of bills of a gen eral character. One hundred and two are of private pension and relief bills.

Carriage after carriage dashed up to the door; workingmen and contadini from the campagna streamed noisily in and out of the edifice; the splashing of the water in the fountain mingled with the voices of children scold ing their mothers, while through the ancient porch, brightened by scraps of priests, American belles, and humble labor ers-all pressing eagerly towards the can

At last the Cardinal, preceded by canons basilica and acolytes with censor and cruciflx, reached the altar steps. There was a transient vision of scarlet, purple, white, and gold as the cortege passed round the altar. The Cardinal, this time wearing the beretta, took a seat on a chair beneath the red and white canopy fringed with gold to hear the bull read appointing him a titular priests of the Basilica. This cerethe building of 616 miles of road, against mony ended the Cardinal rose, holding the beretta in both hands, and began a short address. First thanking the Father for having given him charge of the beautiful old church, he glided into a patriotic eulogy of the civil and religious liberty of America, which, thanks to the grace of God, had permitted the Catholic Church to grow into a large tree, spread ing its branches through the length and breadth of the land. Recalling the late encyclical of the Pope, he showed that Catholicism flourished under all Governments. "For myself," he continued, "with a deep sense of pride and gratitude I say, here in this great Capital of Christendom that I belong to a country where civil government holds over us the ægis of its protection. Our country has liberty without license and authority without despotism; it erects no wall to exclude strangers, and no frowning fortification to repel invaders." He added: "Her harbors open on the Atlantic and the Pacific." After a passing reference to the social problems now engaging the attention of Americans, the Cardinal blessed the bystanders and resumed his seat. The choir burst into Te Deum, the procession reformed, and the Cardinal passed down the altar steps into the sacristy, where for a quarter of an hour he sat receiving congratulations and chatting pleasantly with his friends.

A 1 RRIBLE CONFESSION.

A Sixteen-Year-Old Boy Confesses to the Murder of his Father, Mother, Brother and Sister.

It will be recollected that a year ago this month one of the bloodiest murders, or rather butcheries of human beings, known to the annals of crime, was committed near the town of Erie, Kan. J. W. Sell, a well-to-do farmer, and his whole family, excepting one son, Willie, a boy 16 years old, were found murdered, their heads being crushed and their throats cut from ear large to ear. On a chair in the room were found a hatchet and butcher-knife belonging to the family, with which the bloody work had been done, and the boy Willie was found to be covered with blood from head to foot. He was accordingly arrested, charged with the crime, and at the July term of the District Court in 1886, was tried, convicted of murder in the first degree, and sentenced to be hanged, and, in conformity with the laws of that state, is now in th penitentiary awaiting the signature of the Governor to the death warrant. There has always been a great diversity of opinion among the people as to whether Willie Sell committed the murder. On the trial there was no positive evidence, and the State utterly failed to find any motive for the crime. On the contrary, it was proven that Willie was an exceptionally good boy, and that he and his sister Ina were more than commonly fond of each other. The neighbors all swore to the boy's good disposition, and that he was a favorite in the community, while his brother Waty, who was older than he, was not so generally liked. The matter now, however, seems to be set at rest, for dispatches from Erie, state that the boy, after systematic urging pressing on the part of Hon. J. H. Woods, is guardian, and his attorneys, made a confession which fits so exactly to the facts and circumstances brought out at the trial that it settles the case defini elv The confession is to the effect that the boy's sister and mother had gone to bed, but that his father and brother Waty were still up when the calves got out, and the father directed Waty to go and put them up. A dispute ensued between Waty, Willie and the father. Willie went out and geting a latchet, (he said to nail up the calf pen', came back in the house, when Waty ached the hatchet from him and struck his father down. Willie then jerked the hatchet from Waty's hand and proceeded o kill Waty when his mother s rang from her bed, and he struck her and then his ster. He then completed the massacre in the most horrible manner.

On the 22nd inst., the President announced the names of the members of the Board of Commissioners of the Inter-State Commerce Law. They are as follows: Thomas M. Cooley, of Michigan, Republican, to serve six years; William R. Morrison, of Illinois, Democrat, five years; Augustus Schoonmaker, of New York, Democrat, four years; Aldace F. Walker, of Vermont, Republican, three years; W. L. Bragg, of Alabama, Democrat, two years.

The new law goes into effect April 4, and red and golden drapery, one got glimpses of the restless multitude—peasants, ceedingly arduous until its various proceedingly arduous until its various provisions have been officially construed and become thoroughly understood by the railroad companies and the public. The lanthe law is somewhat ambiguous in places, and some of its most important clauses seem fairly open to conflicting constructions. The first duty of the commission will be to tell the country exactly what the law means. Of course the commission can do no more at the outset than to outline their general theory of the scope and effect of the law. Its application in a great number of cases must be uncertain until the courts or the commission are called upon to determine the particular questions involved.

SKETCHES.

Judge Thomas M. Cooley was born at Attica, N. Y., in 1824, and removed to Michigan in 1843, where he has since re In 1857 he was elected compiler of the State laws, and in 1858 he was chosen reporter of the Supreme Court. In 1859 was appointed commissioner to organize the law department of the University of Michigan, and he has ever since been connected with it. He served three terms in the Supreme Court, but was defeated in 1885. He is the author of numerous standard legal works and holds high rank as a jurist. He was appointed last December by Judge Gresham as receiver of the Wabash Railroad. His presence on the commission will give it the confidence of the country and will be a guarantee to both the public and the railroad companies that the law will be administered faithfully and impartially. Much is hoped from his practical railroad experience as well as from his legal reputation. Judge Cooley is probably the only member of the commission who makes a heavy pecuniary sacrifice by accepting the office. It has been stated that he gives up $25,000 a year in leaving the Wabash receivership. is one reason why he was given the longest term, as it was felt, this much was due

After the war he settled in Marion, Alabama, and moved to Montgomery in 1871. He was chairman of the Democratic State Executive Committee in 1874, 1875, and 1876. In 1876 he was appointed Alabama's member of the National Democratic Committee when the convention met in St. Louis. In 1880 he was elector for the State at large for Hancock and English. In March, 1881, he was appointed president of the Alabama railroad commission, and was reappointed in 1883, his term expiring March, 1885. HOW TO MAKE A BED.

Ordinary sheets, blankets and coverlids are too short and too narrow: they do not admit of a bed being well made. A quarter of a yard all round, beyond the edge of the mattrass, is necessary for tucking in and for overlaying at the top so that the shoulders may be covered. A worn but clean blanket should cover the upper mattrass in winter and over this the sheet should be spread smoothly and adequately. The bolster with its hemstitched linen cover, should be laid a few inches below the top of the mattrass so as to better support the shoulders when lying down, and give a better pitch to the pillows as they stand against the head of the bedstead. Blankets to be large enough must be of good quality; cheap blankets are always unsatisfactory because inadequate both in size and warmth. Care should be taken that they are not laid evenly together upon the bed, but the upper one lowered from the top of the other fully the depth of the bordering.

This graduates the bulk and will prevent undue weight about the shoulders when the clothes are turned over: it also allows of abundant margin for "tucking in" at the foot; a matter of great importance, especially when a bed is occupied by two person.

The "foot" blanket is another important item. If the luxury of a narrow down coverlid can be afforded for the feet so much the better; it is a comfort that once enjoyed will never after be willingly dispensed with in cold weather. FOR HOUSE PLANTS.

Without good soil, no one can succeed in growing house plants well. We have little faith in chip dirt for plants for best results; we have great lics, faith in what gardeners call "fibrous loam" for the same purper. Those few things-and those good-in lieu who lived in the country find it an easy matter to have a good lot of this article on hand at all times. City plant growers can procure the same of the florists cure sods to or three inches thick, from a rich pasture lot, or from the roadside, at some spot where the earth is good. O, of course Annie said "Yes"-who wouldn't? And when the quarter to 1 whistle blew John (who was very punctual) went from Room 32 to the factory as one walking on air-mayhap his empty stomach had something to do with the lightish feeling, but he never thought of that, of course. Annie sat and laughed and cried to think how happy she was, and spent the remainder of her holiday until evening building air-castles until John came back and began to put solid foundations to the same by means of his pocket-book.

They were married two months afterward, and the next day John gave his wife a small bundle rolled up in white paper and tied with blue ribbon. Full of wonder, Mrs. John untied the ribbon and beheld-her lost red stockings!

"Why, John!" she exclaimed, instinctively running her hand down to the toe. But there were no holes-only two or three dainty little darns, and is safe to predict that John's socks will never suffer.

THE CAMP FIRE.

The members of U.S. Grant Post, in Chicago, recently presented Mrs. Logan

THE LOGAN ESCUTCHEON.

a beautifully ornamented escutcheon, emblematic of Gen. Logan's brilliant career. The presentation speech was made by Chaplain Bolton, and the response by Gen. Logan's son, Manning, (now known as John A. Logan). The occasion was one of extraordinary interest. The escutcheon is painted on canvas and is about thirty by twentyfour inches, handsomely framed. The painting is composed of three parts: The escutcheon proper, which is a shield; the crest, which shows the arms of the United States-because of the National service-and a scroll at the bottom for the name and rank. The shield is divided into four parts. The two upper quarterings are emblazoned with the army insignia or devices, so arranged as to show the consecutive events of service—a Second Lieutenant's shoulder strap for service in the Mexican war; a Colonel's, Brigadier's, and Major General's straps, earned in the War of the Rebellion. The lower quarterings are emblazoned with the division corps and army flags of his several commands. On the cross which quarters the escutcheon in gold lettering on red ground are enumerated the features of Gen. Logan's service, battles participated in, wounds received, and various commands held during service. On a banner suspended from the base is given his civil record. From the scroll depend the badges of the various army and military societies with which he was connected. At the intersection of the cross is the seal of the State of Illinois. The whole makes a very handsome record or history of the services, both military and civil, of one of the greatest Generals of the late War of the Rebellion. The society badges represented are the Army of the Tennessee, Seventeenth Corps, Badge of Honor, Military Order of the Loyal Legion, and Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Re-

AN EFFECTIVE REBUKE.

A piece of quiet irony, which suggests more than it says, is one of the most effective methods of administering reproof. But it must be delicately put, for the least bungling will make it a failure.

One day, while Gen. Robert E. Lee was visiting the lines at Petersburg, he asked an officer, riding with him, if a certa n work he, Lee, had ordered was finished. The officer replied, after a little hesitation, that it was.

"Then let us ride to the spot and inspect it," said Lee.

On arriving there, he found that little progress had been made in the work, and the confused officer tried to excuse himself by saying, "I ordered it to be done at once, and I was told that it had been completed, but I did not think it necessary to verify the fact by a personal inspection.'

"We must give our personal attention to the lines," said Gen. Lee, riding on. In a few minutes he began complimenting the officer's horse.

"Yes, sir," answered the officer, "he is a splendid animal, and I prize him the more highly because he is my wife's favorite riding horse." "A magnificent horse, but I should not think him safe for Mrs. --- to ride," said Gen. Lee. "He's too spirited for a lady, and I would urge you by all means to take some of the mettle out. of him before you permit your wife to ride him again. And, by the way, general, I would suggest to you that the rough paths along these trenches would be admirable ground over which to train him." A REVOLUTIONARY PENSIONER.

A bill was introduced in the Pennsylvania Senate the other day to increase the pension of the only Revolutionary pensioner in the State. Mrs. Betz was married formerly to a drummer-boy of the Revolution when she was 16 years old. Her husband, Peter Betz, was then 55 years of age. Thirty-four years afterward the latter died, and since then his widow has been residing in that State. She is now 89 years old, and considering her age is quite vivacious. Peter Betz learned to play the drum on a halfbushel measure, and was taken into the army by a man named Thompson. He gave five years' service to his country, and, after having outlived his first wife, he married the woman who is now receiving the only Revolutionary pension in Pennsylvania. Mrs. Betz takes great delight in relating incidents of her husband's life. She is a widow at the request of Mr. Betz, who cautioned her never to marry again. She says on one occasion her husband and a comrade in the army were caught in the act of stealing geese from a farmer during a time when the soldiers were almost starved. Gen. Washington rebuked them for larceny, and added: "My children, you can steal geese, but don't let me know of it, as I would have to punish you." Notwithstanding this admonition," said the old lady, "my husband said Gen. Washington helped to eat the

THE NATIONAL ENCAMPMENT G. A. R. The Chairmen of the sub-committees of the General Executive Committee for the Twenty-first National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic held a meeting at their headquarters in the Lindell Hotel at St. Louis, last week, and prepared a circular for transmission to each of the 6,000 posts in the country, giving full information concerning accommodations, railroad rates, and all matters pertaining to the Encampment. The committee have determined to lose no time, and will push matters as rapidly as possible. Much has already been accomplished, and affairs are sufficiently advanced for the fact to be manifest that the coming Encamp. ment will be by far the largest ever heid. Fully 250,000 people will be in the city upon the occasion of the great parade, but should an even greater number be present there will be no difficulty in furnishing suitable accommodations, owing to the excellent arrangements which will be made by those having the matter in charge.

Free Speech.

Shall It be Throttled in Michigan?

The menacing attitude of a class of the serious attention of all citizens who realize the importance of maintaining citizens to discuss questions of public policy and to express their convictions thereon at the ballot-box, unmolested; and whoever seeks by threats and terrorism, boycott and persecution, to deter citizens from the exercise of that right, is in rebellion against; the very foundation principle of our government, national and state, and at war with the most essential personal and civil right of the people.

This indictment we bring against a class of the people of the state, who are many of them aliens and subjects of foreign powers, and more of them alien in origin and sentiment. The Legislature has in lawful manner submitted to the people an important question of state policy, to be determined by their votes-the prohibition amendment to the constitution. The people are in lawful manner considering and discussing that question throughout the state. by speech and print, in order to reach the wisest decision upon it. But here arises the class above described, who forbid the discussion of the affirmative side of that question, upon pain of unlawful injury to any who shall disregard their warning. They threaten stealthy vengeance by the torch. "If you don't stop your prohibition work, we will burn you out, root and branch,' was the warning letter sent to F. N. Monroe, hardware merchant of Howell, recently, and signed, "Many Saloonkeepers." He did not stop, and he was burned out, root and branch, by a fire of mysterious origin which destroyed a vast amount of property beside. "If you make another prohibition speech in the state, we will burn your house with your family in it," was the threat of a letter sent to Col. Sylvester Larned of Detroit, and signed, "Many Citizens"; and at Holly, Sunday evening, March 20, the Methodist church was set on fire while filled with people listening to a prohibition speech, and an awful holocaust was only averted by prompt discovery of the devilish deed They threaten to ruin the business of any man who votes for the amendment, and are taking steps to make good the threat. On the same Sunday that the Holly church was fired, a large delegate meeting at Turner Hall in Detroit, composed of appointed representatives of the saloon keepers' association, the brewers, and various allied associations, was held under the name of the anti-prohibition association. The secretary, appointed at a previous meeting, reported that six thousand persons had signed the roll not to deal with merchants who favored the Amendment. and a committee was appointed to see all merchants whose names appeared on the prohibition call and ascertain if they had signed it. Committees to menace the business men of the city with similar visits had been appointed at previous meetings; and it is little wonder that under such pressure a long list of signatures to the Duffield antiamendment meeting should be procured among the business men, or that such signers should privately confess, as some have, that the call did not express their real sentiments.

The difference between destroying a man's business and property by fire, and destroying it by the boycott compiracy, is a difference in the degree of afety to the perpetrators, and not a man's business and property by fire, and destroying it by the boycott conspiracy, is a difference in the degree of safety to the perpetrators, and not a difference in principle. Both are stealthy, lawless, wicked, and abhorrent to every sentiment of right and justice among the American people; and when they are aimed against the free exercise of the civil and political rights of the citizen, they are treason to the government as well as crimes bred Durham cow of Dave Uhl lately against the law. Since the above was in type, there comes in the Detroit Journal of last evening this remarkable justification of even more than we have said:

Alderman Frank Bleser sa d this morning, "If I were a prohibitionist you wouldn't get me east of Woodward avenue next Monday. Here's a chance for prohibitionists to insure their lives on Saturday and die rich Monday. I am speaking the solid truth when 1 say that IT WON'T BE SAFE FOR A MAN TO VOTE FOR PROHIBITION in my part of town. I have been told that LADIES would be at the polls. I hope not, and I fear THEY WILL BE INSULTED."
